THOMAS WHALEN.

Thomas Whalen, ailas "Mockingblrd," hears a charmed life. At all events, he is not going to cross Jordan by the railway

A few years ago he was seated on the C. and O. tracks near Builcreek, in com pany with a basket of chickens.

Along came the "Fiyer" and away went Whalen.

An examination developed that of the chickens only a few featbers remained.

The basket hasn't been found yet.

As to Whalen, he was found in the adjoining county, sleeping as sweetly as a babe, without even a ruffle in his shirt osom, but awfully dry.

Last night about 8 o'clock he was in the neighborhood of the Bail Park, encreach ing on the Street Railway track, when Motor No. 1 came sweeping along with Engineer Gillespie at the thyottle.

HON. BOYD WINCHESTER REPU DIATES HARDIN.

I Fair Sumple of the "Harmony(?)" That Prevails in the Democratic Household in Kentucky-Repudi-ated By Honest Men.

Patricius bad attacked Acollies in the very armor in which be bad invested him for the destruction of Hector.

It is too late to prate shout the currency question being improperly injected into a state campaign: that is res judicata. The Democratic masses, largely inspired by deneral Hardin, and the convention at their bebest by an accombinative malarity made it. inagely inspired by General Bardin, and to convention at their bebest by an over-whelming majority made it the paramount question. However some may criticine such political action as uneasoning and dinastrous to the best interests of state government, nine voters out of ten in a state olection cast their baliots in unquestioning altigations to parties based on National issues. It is exactly worth while to note the contention made by afterthought that the financial plank of the state platform is not a sound money declaration. This antiphrastic achievement reaches a pitch of moral idiopyncracy and peculiar wisdom" of the party or aurrender his commission.

Does anybody doubt that if General Hardin, lu accepting the nomination, bad made his Auditorium speech, the convention would have resented such a flagrant defance and reversal of its platform. At a time when it was fondly believed that the committee bad left itself no blunder uncommitted, it was seized with the spirit of invention, and discovered; a new and fresh blunder to perpetrate. It issued an address, which, boiled and peeled, means an abject and unconditional surrender by the sound money Democrats. In the sarcastic fancy of Disraeli, it would "bare no more party questions, but go in for flatity of tenure. For the sake of party success it would sacrifice the very thing for which the party had apoken most insitentify, and the only raison d'etre of the earnest contest in the election of delogates and over the building of the platform in the convention. "Whatever opinions you may boid on economic questions, you ahoutd lay teem on the altar of the party for its safety and success," is the remarkable request of the committee. This grim request of the committee. This grim request of the committee. This grim request is clothed in the garb of good motives and aminhe intention, and we are ready to believe that it is a sincere appeal to head and comment at any sacrifice, and the contest of the committee. This grim request of the form of the contest and and most at a contest of the contest of the contest of the contest of the contest of

One of the most important functions of party organization is the adoption of a platform or declaration of principles. This responsible duty is instrusted to conventions composed of delegates chosen for the purpose. A party appeals to the voter with a platform, which is a statement of the policy it desires to see carried out. Candidates are se lacted as representatives of the policy tulus laid down, and their acceptance of the nominations is justly regarded as their public indorsement of the doctrines see forth. The following are extracts from Mr. Winchester's eard, after he had recited the circumstances of the adoption of the platform and Hardin's subsequent defi-ance of the party and the State Central Committee:

The Committee seemed to be stricken with paralysis; forgetting that power and consideration are things not to be begged, but must be commanded, it followed the path of less resistance which does not siways mean the path of stefy and still less the path of progress. Instead of the path of the path of progress, instead of the path of the path

To the sound money Democrats may be commended the aphorism: "The sau should not set upon our anger, neither about he rise upon our condidence." History detests dupes and treats them aimost as accomplices, and the sound money Democrats who are preposing to support General Hardie will be certain to depiere with unavailing positence their mistake.
